Daily Universe Wins Honors, Cash In National Highway Safety Contest

BRIGHAM Young Daily Universe's pre-Christmas safety campaign earned national honors and a $250 award, it was learned Tuesday morning.

Editor Ralph Barney announced that the campaign, competing in an annual contest conducted by the Lumbermen's Mutual Casualty Co., won second place in the college dailies division of the national contest.

A TELEGRAM notifying the Daily Universe of the award was received from James Scott Kemper, Lumbermen's official in Los Angeles, Calif.

Information concerning the winner of the $500 first prize in the daily newspaper category will be forwarded later, the telegram said.

Daily Trojan, University of California student newspaper, won first place honors in 1956, and the Daily Texan, of the University of Texas, received second place and in the contest that year.

DAILY Universe's campaign consisted of a series of four front-page dramatic drawings, with editorials emphasizing various points of safety student drivers should observe while traveling home for the Christmas vacation. Feature stories and front page winner headlines were also used to promote the campaign.

Artist drawing the cartoons for the series was Roy Davies, Ogden, art major and Daily Universe staff artist.

IT WAS NOT learned, Barney said, whether other Daily Universe entries earned awards.

A feature story on traffic accidents, one of the cartoons and an editorial were entered in individual contests. Prizes for the individual winnings is $100 each

This is the second year in which the Daily Universe has participated in the contest," Barney said.

Apostle Stresses Truth As Foundation Of Life

by Barbara Miller

TRUTH is the basis for life and for the gospel of Jesus Christ declared George Q. Morris, member of the Quorum of the Twelve Apostles of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints in devotional Tuesday.

Elder Morris established the center of truth in the gospel of Jesus Christ and his atonement in his address entitled "Understanding Brigham Young University are "in search of truth. Nothing," he stressed, "is so wonderful, powerful and eternal as the truth."

IN THE MIND of the apostle truth is the only foundation and solid rock upon which a person can stand. The moment one departs he is in serious trouble.

"However at BYU," declared the apostle, "we must study truth to our relations with God. We're blest in being in an institution where our relations can be true with God."

LDS people are especially fortunate because they have a religion that is true because it is revealed, said Elder Morris. God has provided that all LDS may know His revealed word and live by it. Those who do will be exalted and achieve peace in this world and eternal happiness after death declared the apostle.

"I FEEL that the truth of the restoration of the gospel of Jesus Christ should dwell in our hearts . . . and should go to the world through us," he said.

Through this same gospel comes the truth of salvation was the opinion of Elder Morris, not through man's wisdom, power and knowledge.

"THE ONLY INTELLIGENT thing for us to do is to follow the truths and teachings of the church with all our hearts, accept them and live by them," said Apostle Morris.

A knowledge of God's kingdom can be gained by believing in Him and keeping his commandments and the Prophet "If we keep the commandments of God we will grow without fail until we have a fulness of light and power," declared Apostle Morris.

Veteran Counselor Here

Veterans Contact Representative Thomas R. Buttrey will visit Provo Wednesday.

Buttrey will advise veterans schooling, GI loans, all types of government life insurance and other topics.

He will be available for interviews at the Utah State Employment Office, 235 W. 1st N. in Provo, from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m.

8 Students Vie For Top Post In BYU's IOC

Eight nominees are vying for top Inter-Organization Council positions for next year's Central council.

Rod Fye, Salt Lake City, senior, Jerry Kindred, Ogden, senior, and Cordell Lufkin, Idaho Falls, Ida., junior, are seeking the president position to be vacated by Mish Hollingworth.

Phil Goldcrest, Riverside, Calif junior, and Valeria Hatch, New York, freshman, are the two nominees for vice president.

Hopefuls for the office of secretary are Deon Benn, Twin Falls, Ida., sophomore; Ruth Olsosen, Salt Lake City, sophomore, and Bonnie Brewster, Portland, Ore., sophomore.

A special IOC meeting will be held Feb. 28 for election. Each organization will submit their vote for president, vice president and secretary at this meeting.

The purpose of holding election after quarter, said Hollingworth, is to give the new officers ample opportunity to learn their new positions.

Thought It Was Spring Fever But It Surely Wasn't Even

by Verland Whipple

The sun shines bright on dear old BYU
'Tis winter, but it looks a lot like spring.
This year snow sculptures will all be made of mud,
And the caravan will be turned-ed night and day.

Spring is in the air, and the birds are singing, and the stars are bright at night, and the moon is bright at night, and everybody should be bright at night. (Don't worry about smart answers —Just don't ask any dumb questions.)

There are sparkles in girls eyes, and a ring in their voices, and now that the new directories are out their will be rings on the phones, and rings on the fingers.

There is a definite correlation between the number of spring days in each year and the number of marriage licenses sold. These extra days of open-hunting season do take their deadly toll.

Weather like this does offer a few advantages, though. You can lay outside and soak up the sunshine from the sky, and the moisture from the ground. You can get a sun tan and pneumonia at the same time.

Also this is terrific weather to go boating on the parking lot.

This might be a parting thought, I don't know for sure, but girls are boys best weather friends, but don't let an early touch of spring fever overcome you so much that you wind up snowed.

Two locations, north and northeast of the Smith Family Living Center are being considered for the building to place almost the center of student pedestrian traffic of the future campus.

Results of a survey circulated among students all quarter have not yet been completely tabulated. Preliminary findings should have been taken to show general trends.

IN THE SURVEY, students were asked to indicate how frequently they would use a specific facility It indicated that at least half of the students would use the following ones frequently.

1. Large ballroom for all campus dances).
2. Large campus theater (to supplement Smith auditorium).
3. General lounge s(men and women).
4. Snacks bar (replacing Smith snack bar).
5. Music listening rooms (with individual hearers).
6. Browsing library (for recreational reading).

Other facilities many students indicated they would use included an information desk, a parking area, bowling alleys, table tennis, television viewing rooms, piano rooms, and a small party room.

Construction of the student center is expected to be completed two years from the time architect Fred Markham completes plans.

Budget Requests Due For Next Year Now

All studentbody organizations wanting a budget from next year's studentbody funds are requested to submit an itemized request to studentbody Business Manager Kelvyn Cullimore, immediately.

Requests for budgets should include itemized lists of all expenses for next year, with justifications for these expenses.

Deadline for the requests is March 1. They may be turned into the studentbody offices in the basement of the Student Service Center.

A WAY TO STRETCH DOLLARS

SINCE MOST of us married paupers at Brigham Young University are perpetually in a state of abject penury, why don't we sew up the hole in our money pockets?

Because of the impracticality of a continuous fast, most of us feel we can't stop eating to save money. But many married BYU students probably could make their money go farther by starting a buying-club.

ONE OF OUR shrewd professors on campus claims he saves up to 7 per cent on food by buying groceries in bulk quantities. A group of people who organized a buying-club called Consumer Council arranged with neighborhood stores for grocery discounts of 5 per cent.

The members shopped as usual and were given their prearranged discounts upon showing their discount cards at the checking stand.

IN ORDER to meet with minimum health standards, the typical man age 21-40 requires an average expenditure of $6.63 weekly for food. Whereas, the wife's average is $5.66. Each child between ages 1-3 requires an average of $3.22 weekly according to the Welfare and Health Council. This amounts to $15.49 weekly. A 5 per cent discount at this weekly expenditure would render an annual saving of over $40.00. If you were spending over $60.00 a month, your saving would be proportionally greater.

WHY DON'T we married couples look into this method of making our money go farther? If you're not abounding in riches, why don't you kick up a little dust to let us know you are interested!

Collegiate Poll Sees . . .

Coach Vs. Professor In Pay Scale

MINNEAPOLIS (ACP)—The head of a college football coach is apt to be a very hectic one, especially if he does not produce winning teams year after year.

Generally they are given two contracts and their longevity in the position depends a good deal upon their record of winning teams. And whether their occupational longevity is doubtful they usually draw pay scale higher than that of the highest ranking college professor.

IN ORDER to get an idea of what collegiate heads think, this reporter in pay scale. Associated Collegiate Press asked the following question of a representative national cross-section of college students:

College football coaches are usually paid more than the highest ranking professor. Do you think this difference in salary is justified?

The results

	Men	Wom.	Total
Yes	24%	15%	20%
No	64%	72%	67%
Undecided	12%	13%	13%

"There appears to be some sex difference in the figures shown, with the coeds leaning more toward the side of the professors and the students favoring the coaches point of view however, the following comment by a Villanova University (Villanova, Pa.) senior is very representative of the reason for gambling that will be around next year.

THE PROFESSOR writes under a contract mental strain which cannot be measured by monetary standards.

AND A WATERVILLE College (Waterville, Iowa) junior believes the work of the coach is hard-er; his is a 12 month and 24 hour job."

Among students favoring the professor's point of view two general feelings stand out 1) the feeling that the professor has more time and money invested in his job, and 2) the feeling that education is more important than football and should be rewarded accordingly. Here are a few typical of these and other opinions expressed

"THE COACH earns it; the relative salaries in the different fields cannot justifiably be compared," is the feeling of a junior attending Newark College of Engineering (Newark, N. J.), while a University of Nebraska (Lincoln) senior looks at it this way: "A college will never have to worry about football's importance because he is mediocre Coaches are under a constant mental

Safety Valve

Let's Play Ball . . .

Dear Editor:

Sportsmanship at Brigham Young University has reached an all-time low! After viewing two basketball games the past weekend while Utah was losing one, BYU's chance for the conference championship probably has never been better. But their chance of being named the sports in the conference has never been better, either.

There has been much said and written—and rightly so—against students booing at the basketball games. But how can anyone expect better conduct from the students when the BYU players bellyache to the officials nearly every time a foul is called against them. Where does all their meowing get them? Does it change the officials' decisions? No, it gets them nothing but an occasional technical foul, which adds nothing to the game but a foul stench.

Why the reluctance among the BYU players to raise their hand when the officials call a foul? Have they become so perfect at the art of playing basketball that it is impossible for them to make a mistake? Why not play ball like champions and act like men?

I believe it was late 1949 or early 1950 that I saw BYU play for the first time They met my own alma mater, Nevada, in two games at Las Vegas The refereeing was definitely poor. Nevada, and the crowd consisted of a lot of people who have no special love for BYU, and yet the BYU team preached a sermon to those people that night. I remember Minson and big Sun Beam in particular. Even when spectators were booing and riding against them, their faces would light up with a grin and say would go their hands. That was sportsmanship! People were favorably impressed.

As students and players alike, let's prove a few rules to play by. Let's let the officials make the decisions. Let's abide by those decisions Let's keep our mouths shut unless we're cheering. Let's play ball. Let's act like mature men and women. Let's be champions!

Ed. Hansen

Champion . . .

Dear Editor:

On behalf of myself and many others who drive cars on the campus, I would like to thank you for being the "champion of the cause." In your editorial you have presented the facts as they stand.

It is easy for administrators and faculty members at Brigham Young University to ask that a school paper be more discriminating in giving the school a dirty laundry list of errors they are being placed in the same position as are the students who do not realize how many students have to work to maintain the parking lot situation? Too often the letters to "Safety Valve" are completely disregarded or reconsidered the ravings of some unintelligent, dissatisfied student who shouldn't be in school because he cannot conform.

Something should be done and if the students cannot motivate action through the student body" can.

It seems to me that the faculty members and administration could profit by imagining themselves in the shoes of the students. If a situation isn't being handled justly, it should be brought out into the open and investigated. I not only possess a car, but have said, but suggest that further investigation be made regarding some of the traffic conditions on this campus. The manner in which Security and Traffic Department meters are handled is certainly open to question. I have talked to many ways

While I am at it, may I say "Amen" to all that Gary J. Bybee stated in his letter in the February 9 issue of the Daily Universe.

C. Paul Andersen

Running Away . .

"HOW TO RUN AWAY FROM A PARKING LOT PROBLEM" (Adapted from a similar article in the Daily Universe staff at University of Chicago.)

1. Profess that you have the answer. That lets you out of being any.

2. Say that we must not move too rapidly in the parking area. This avoids the necessity of getting started.

3. For every proposal solve the opposite problem in the middle ground (or mud ground) (no motion whatever). This is the golden course section.

4. Say that the problem cannot be separated from other problems. Therefore it can't be solved. Say that much progress has been solved, or until lots of people

5. Ask what is meant by question. By the time it is clarified, it will be time for a dead.

6. Discover that there are kinds of dangers in any specific formulation of solutions; dangers of committing the organization deeply at this moment in the hands of the wrong people; etc.

7. Appoint a committee to find out clarifying its function.

8. Wait until an expert can be consulted.

9. State in conclusion that we have all clarified your thinking. This observer feels that that is no small accomplishment done

10. Point out how the dividends have accumulated on some problem. This implies that you deserve credit for creating thought of it

11. In closing, thank the parent. It has stimulated the discussion, contributed to growth, opened up new vistas shown us the way, and challenged our inventiveness. It may have wasted four perfectly good years, but the price would get a medal."

Library Certificate Considered Helpful

"Education majors would do well to look into the advantages of also earning a librarian's certificate," said Hilde Knight, Grant Library science chairman.

"Now it is possible to get this certificate by taking only nine additional hours of work," she said.

Mrs Knight also stated that a minor in library is something that is well worth considering. She pointed out that demand for librarians is great. Every summer teachers are sent to school for the purpose of filling library requirements.

"The demand will undoubtedly increase since accreditation committees insist that schools have qualified personnel in their libraries," she said.

One teacher who had taken a library class, not to become a librarian, but to help in her teaching made this typical remark. "The class has opened new doors to me by putting at my finger-tips information to guide me in finding what I need either as a librarian or as a teacher."

Mrs Knight encouraged anyone who is interested to come talk to her about library possibilities. "The work is truly challenging and rewarding, for it contains all of the advantages of teaching, plus others," she concluded.

Prison Instructor Featured On New York TV Program

MARVIN HOGENSON, Brigham Young University senior, was featured on the Columbia Broadcasting television show "To Tell the Truth" on Feb. 12.

Hogenson, who student teaches night school at the Utah State Prison, met representatives of CBS at the recent prison riot. Hogenson was chosen to be on the program because he was one of the first hostages released by the rioting prisoners. The company thought that his story would be of interest to the public.

ON THE PROGRAM, which was shown in Utah at 7:30 p.m. as a live production, a panel of experts were to pick Hogenson from three people. The other two men were a New York doctor and a drama student. Both of the men are also members of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

The panel asked the three men questions mostly about the LDS church. Other questions concerned BYU and the prison riot. The three men stumped the panel.

HOGENSON, who left from Salt Lake on Feb. 10 and returned on Feb 13, spoke to the National Warden's Convention while he was in the East.

While in New York, all Hogenson's expenses were paid.

He stayed at the Waldorf Astoria Hotel and had a guide to tour the city with him. Most of his time was spent at the United Nations building.

AFTER THE television broadcast, the entire cast went to supper at Jack Dempsey's supper club and then went to the Broadway show, "Li'l Abner."

Hogenson said he tought that New York was a "big, noisy, unusual city." The taxi cab drivers "would just as soon run you down as look at you," he said. It seemed to Hogenson that the "people were in a big hurry to get nowhere."

Fullmer 'Brawls' Way Through Match To Decision Durando

Mauling and brawling like an unjointed bear, Middleweight Champion of the world Gene Fullmer used the battered features of a washed up Ernie Durando as a punching bag and won a ten-round decision in Denver Monday night.

Flailing away like a rank amateur, Fullmer did everything but strangle his cringing opponent with the ring ropes. Durando, the Rock from Bayonne, N. J., was content to stay on his feet throughout the fight.

Durando threw about 10 token punches in the brawl and this lack of offense, coupled with Fullmer's wildness, incited a continual roar of boos from the fourth round on.

Fullmer meets Charley "King" Cotton next Wednesday in Denver on a national TV hookup.

Utah Aims For Second Spot In Skyline Race

by Harry James
U of U Athletic Publicist

The University of Utah's revenge-bound Redskins, intent on evening the score with two arch rivals, clash with Cougars from Brigham Young University Thursday night at Einar Nielsen Fieldhouse and Saturday with Utah State on the same floor. Game time each night is 8 p.m.

Having suffered losses in the hands of both teams on their home courts earlier in the year, Ute Coach Jack Gardner says, "Second place rides on the outcome of these games, which are always big ones regardless of past marks."

High riding Brigham Young, almost a cinch for the Skyline crown and winner of 15 of its last 17 games, edged the Utes at Provo two weeks ago, 81-80. "But regardless of the outcome of that game, and forgetting championships and records for anything else," Gardner says, "we're aiming to knock off league leaders off Thursday night, or at the very least give them a tough night."

Big Milt Kane, averaging over 29 points a game for the last three tilts, will be the Utes' big gun in these grudge battles. Playing from either the post or his normal position at forward, Kane has demonstrated a remarkable ability to come through with the big points in the clutch. Power will be perhaps the fastest pair of hands in the Skyline. Milt scores mostly around the basket on drives and has an excellent twisting jump shot from outside.

Stopping the rebounding for John Benson and Lorin Roe, and the outside shooting of Tom Steinke will be the Utes' big problem against the Cougar Playmaker Harry Anderson and center Ron Hooker also give the Utes trouble in Provo. BYU scores mostly with a fast break all the way with its starting five.

Against the A. C. of Lobos the Redskins had a tough time solving the Aggies' defense, and this may be the big problem again. However Bill Hahn, perhaps the best rebounder in the conference, Jack Lechner and Frank Polak have paced the Aggs the biggest part of the season, but Larry Hale is also becoming fast in recent games.

Utah's starting line-up for tonight is in doubt. Tracy Dee Shores, who looked so good against BYU on defense, may work into the starting five, with Kane at center, leaving Jerry McCleary, Carl Jensen and Gary Hale. Or Gardner may decide to give Shores more offensive help with the hope that he can get by with a smaller line-up, with McCleary at center, Kane at forwards and Hale and Jenson on the guard line.

Jerry's Jargon

by Jerry Cunningham

Twelfth in the nation! Not bad for a team everybody had picked for fourth or fifth in the Skyline Conference. As a matter of fact, Coach Watts may be as pleasantly surprised as anyone.

One of the major national news services and the coaches poll, numbers BYU among the top dozen teams in the United States. The Cougars have climbed a long way up the country's casaba ladder to gain rung number 12, especially since the ladder has upwards of 500 steps.

Local basketball experts may be able to recall when stronger teams represented BYU. They may contend that the stalwarts which have led BYU this year don't quite measure up to the likes of Hutchins, Nelson, Manson, Richie, et al.

We don't aspire to come up with a Cougar team of the past which measures up to this year's team in aggressiveness and overall versatility.

For instance you could come up with a better ballhandler and floor man than Tom Steinke and you could name a better shooting guard than Harry Anderson But take this year's guard combination and we defy anyone to pick a guard duo of the past with such overall versatility in shooting ability, speed and ball handling.

Take our forwards. You could name taller ones than Johnny Benson and Lynn Roe. You could pick out better set shooters and drivers and maybe name a better rebounder. But we challenge anyone to come up with a better forward combination from a team in the past that combines shooting, speed, and rebounding as well as Benson and Roe.

Roy Thacker has developed wonderfully at the pivot. A sophomore, Thacker's rebounding and scoring are just good enough to give the Cougars the balance they need. A Roy Thacker is about all that Utah needs to make them go.

We realize BYU hasn't copped the national championship yet. But, regardless of the outcome of their future games, the student body appreciates the wonderful showing of the team so far They have made a few sports writers eat words.

Fencing Starts In Intramurals; Competition Slated For Coeds

For the first time in intramurals, coeds will be allowed to enter in the department fencing tourney. Entries will close Thursday, Feb 21

Last year twenty-two participants passed by in the sword waving parade. However Bill Hafen, intramural director, expects that more will enter this year due to the opening of the competition to coeds

The fencing events will be open to the men: Epee, Foil, and Sabre. The women will be restricted to foil.

The tourney will take place Feb. 22, in the North gym of the Smith Fieldhouse.

Competition in the intramural loop-parade is fast drawing to a close. Hafen has announced that all league competition will close on Feb. 20. After this date a round-robin knockout tourney will begin between the two leading teams in each league.
